

On our way to the subway to Harvard. Would you park your car here? A lot by The Garden where the Bruin's play.

NPR's "Car Talk" lawyers, Dewey, Cheetham & Howe. at Harvard Square.

On left is a replica of a gold nugget that was found in Australia.

We tour Harvard's Peabody Museum & the Natural History Museum.

Totem poles in the Peabody Museum of Archaeology & Ethnology.

The “Dia de los Muertos” altar in the Peabody Museum.

Being a rock hound, Joyce is elated with the Minerals, Gems, & Meteorites exhibit in the Natural History Museum.

Many glass cases full of beautiful gems.

Hyalophane
twinned crystal
Bosovaca,
Bosnia
Acquired 1987

Tektosilicate

129169

Labradorite
note the colorful "schiller" effect
Bekily,
Toliara, Madagascar
Acquired 2002

134755

A beautiful sample of Labradorite like we first saw at the St. John's Geo Center in NFLD, Horns & antlers exhibit.

Some bizarre animal skeletons.

Harry Potter fans are everywhere even at Harvard. Here's Snape's Patronus.

Snape's Patronus

White-tailed Deer, Odocoileus virginianus

A fawn in the forest usually signals that a doe is nearby. Like most deer, the white-tailed doe lacks antlers. Only in caribou do females have antlers. A silver doe is the patronus for both Severus Snape and Lily Potter. Can you find other animals that resemble the patronuses for Hermione, Luna, and Kingsley Shacklebolt?

Lots of stuffed, dead animals (Carl said that).

More animals in the Natural History Museum at Harvard.

A fountain by the farmer's market at Harvard's Science Building.

Carl by a Chinese statue at Harvard.

Joyce, feeling smarter, as she leaves Harvard.

Listening to classical violinists as we wait in the subway.

We get more food in Quincy Market.

A Faneuil Hall Market plaque near Quincy Market.

Paul Revere on his famous ride to warn of the approaching British.

The North End Italians celebrate a different Saint every weekend.

Little girl at the Della Cava festival in the North End singing a song by Lady Gaga.

Friends, Judy & Aubrey's boat Veleda IV at the Constitution Marina. They have been living aboard and cruising since 1998 & have traveled the world.

Judy & Aubrey from Veleda IV visit us at Constitution Marina.